Fostering High Performance in the New Work Environment

Overview

In today's competitive world and uncertain economic times, the most effective way for businesses to achieve profitable growth is to focus on increasing the performance of its employees.

There is widespread agreement, from a recent survey, that organizations need breakthrough performance from their employees to continue to meet their business goals. Employees are striving to meet these high expectations but are reaching their limits and organizations cannot simply continue to rely on employees doing more.

The world of work keeps changing and this continues to affect the way work is done and new competencies are required from employees if they are to be effective within this new environment.

It is important for organizations that its leaders are aware of these changing trends if they are to support and effectively guide and motivate employees and bring out the best in them. Effective leadership also calls for an understanding that performance criteria must also reflect the new competencies required for high performance.

This workshop focuses on global trends that are changing the world of work. It is built around recent and in-depth research that points to the fact that breakthrough performance needed to meet business goals is becoming increasingly unlikely through conventional means.

Participants will learn the new competencies necessary for high performance in today's world and how they, as leaders can help build and sustain these competencies.

The workshop will provide appropriate resources to ensure the success of work teams and best practices for addressing individual leadership challenges. Participants will learn how to replicate high-performance practices in their organizations and create an environment that brings out the best in people. Participants will identify their key leadership challenges and develop Personal Action Plans to address those challenges based on course learnings, feedback and interaction with their peers.

Enterprise Leadership

Overview

Organizations invest in leadership development to equip their leaders enable and accelerate strategy. Increasingly, many leaders are struggling to do this in today's work environment, not because they lack the right competencies, but because the new work environment has significantly affected both leader-peer and leader-team dynamics. Strategy execution now demands 'Enterprise Leadership' to be effective.

Recent research shows that Enterprise Leaders are defined by two types of outcomes.

1. First, they achieve strong individual leadership performance by reaching their goals and leading their teams to do the same.
2. Second, they show great network leadership outcomes—working with other leaders and their teams to transfer and acquire resources and best practices that improve organizational outcomes.

Research reports that only 12% of leaders in organizations are true Enterprise Leaders.

This workshop focuses on how to develop Enterprise Leaders. It is built around recent research on the need to redefine leadership skills for today's work environment. It will foster in participants the adaptive mindset which is required for successful enterprise leadership. Participants will identify their key leadership challenges and develop personal Action Plans to address those challenges based on course learnings, feedback and interaction with peers.

Conflict Resolution Training

Overview

Conflict is inevitable. However, most people feel uncomfortable about conflict and conflict management and see conflict as indicative of a problem. Conflicts will always arise in personal interactions both in and out of work, in team settings at work and relationships with clients, customers and other stakeholders. The fact is that conflict is healthy and is necessary to enable the resolution of an issue. Without addressing a conflict situation, the issues keep recycling and lead to sub-optimal outcomes at both personal and organizational levels

This workshop is designed to help participants handle conflicts and conflict situations. It provides a reference point to enable people deal with conflicts in a clear, rational, assertive, and non-aggressive manner. It provides participants with usable, relevant and confidence building tools to help them handle this difficult arena more effectively.

3. On-Boarding, Off - Boarding Training

- Essentials of Organisational Socialisation (New employee Onboarding)
- Pre-Retirement Seminar

Essentials of Organisational Socialisation (New Employee Onboarding) Session

Overview

Whether they are entry-level beginners or corporate leaders, new hires are more likely to become productive workers and stay with the company if their onboarding experiences fully integrate them into the employer's corporate culture.

Our On-boarding sessions are designed to support new hires to ensure they have all the critical information necessary to ramp up in their roles and contribute their talents and expertise to meaningful work. All our organisational socialisation sessions are bespoke and we work with our clients to support the on-boarding journey of new hires for the first three or six months.

New hires complete a series of follow-on training events within their first 90 days at the firm. This follow-on training includes a new hire welcome event with a senior leader guest speaker. New hires also attend group-specific orientations to ensure they are aligned with their specific team goals as well as gain a deep understanding of opportunities for career development.

We also provide additional resources and immersion programs for senior staff to accelerate their learning about leadership roles and expectations.

Objectives

Our sessions aim to:

- Provide employees with the skills and knowledge they need to succeed in their new jobs
- Increase productivity and employee retention by making personal connections and demonstrating your commitment
- Introduce company policies, procedures, and culture
- Ensure that employees quickly get up to speed on job skills and company culture

Pre- Retirement Seminar

Overview

Some people see retirement as a whole new world of opportunity; others approach it with a sense of concern. The fact is that planning for retirement is more important today than it has ever been. Retirees are much healthier, much more active and can expect to live much longer. This means that it is extremely important to understand the opportunity that retirement presents for us personally and to remove any concerns we may have in order to help us to decide when we want to retire.

This workshop will provide you with tools to help you prepare and plan for a successful, healthy transition from work to retirement. The workshop has been developed, based on experience, to cover all the key lifestyle aspects of retirement from health and leisure to finance and relationships.

Course Profile

Managing Finances
The Challenges of transition
Managing the emotions of change
Managing Budgets
Exploring talents & interests
Health & Well-being
Managing relationships

Who will benefit

We recommend that individuals who are within five years of their planned retirement would benefit most from this seminar. The workshops can be attended with or without partners, but if budget allows we strongly recommend that partners should be invited, as experience has shown us that there are extra benefits when they attend.

- Dealing with Unconscious Bias
- Managing Generational Differences
- Cultural Integration

Fostering Diversity for Corporate Growth

Overview

People are the most important asset of any company. For companies to succeed, they must make the most of the full range of their people. Diversity exists when groups of people bring their own backgrounds and experiences to an organization or workplace. Diversity is more than just workforce demographics. Embracing diversity can bring a broader range of mindsets and backgrounds into the organization leading to more effective decision-making for the benefit of the organization. Maximizing the potential of a diverse workforce is not only a social imperative, but is also a competitive advantage.

This workshop focuses on how to manage and leverage diversity in the workplace. The workshop explores assumptions, beliefs, generalities, discrimination, prejudice, perception, and stereotypes. Dealing with Unconscious Bias

Overview

The concept of unconscious bias is gaining a lot of attention as the dynamics of Diversity and Inclusion in the workplace keeps changing. Unconscious bias refers to our natural people preferences. Buried within the subconscious of everyone are biases which we consciously reject. People can consciously and deliberately work to behave without prejudices yet still possess hidden negative prejudices and stereotypes. An awareness of unconscious bias allows us to fundamentally rethink the way we approach leadership, organizational policies and culture on a number of different levels.

This workshop explores the concept of Unconscious bias. It is designed to help participants become aware of what biases they have and the impact these could have on their decision making. The workshop explores proven strategies for addressing unconscious bias in the workplace. It equips participants the tools to improve people decisions and enhance diversity and inclusion to the benefit of the organization.

Managing Generational Differences

Overview

There is growing concern in organisations on how best to manage a workforce of three generations with differing mindsets and communication styles. The key to reducing generational conflicts and creating a harmonious and inclusive work environment is to effectively address and take advantage of the differences in values and expectations of each generation while being careful not to follow blanket stereotypes.

This workshop enables participants to understand each generation, their needs, communication preferences, and what is important to them. Participants create their own roadmap of strategies on how to work more effectively with each generation so that the workplace is able to benefit and celebrate the talents of each generation, all while embracing and managing their differences.
